What is Affiliate Marketing

Definition: Affiliate marketing is a performance-based marketing strategy where individuals (affiliates) promote products or services on behalf of a company (advertiser) and earn a commission for each sale or referral they generate.

Purpose: The primary goal of affiliate marketing is to drive targeted traffic to the advertiser's website and generate sales or leads. It provides a mutually beneficial arrangement for both affiliates and advertisers, as affiliates can earn passive income while advertisers expand their reach and customer base.

Advertiser: The company or business that offers products or services and seeks to increase sales through affiliate marketing.

Affiliate: Individuals or website owners who promote the advertiser's products or services through various marketing channels.

Consumer: The end-user or potential customer who makes a purchase or takes a desired action through the affiliate's
